

I have been notified by a radio station that my wife & I financially support and listen to primarily, known to markets throughout the U.S. as KLOVE that the FCC is currently reviewing policy that may be to the detriment of the KLOVE broadcast signal.

We stand in fierce opposition to any policy or broadcast changes (such as the proposed LPFM) that would endanger or cause difficulty to the uninhibited signals of KLOVE.

KLOVE is an extremely positive public service paid for (under FCC rules) by its listeners! We have--as a collective group chosen to support this signal and would be extremely mis-served by the FCC if any rule would affect this signal negatively.

We support KLOVE, we are served by KLOVE on a daily basis. Hundreds of thousands of individuals are served by KLOVE each day in cities throughout the country and we appreciate their service very much. It truly is AN ENCOURAGING WORD.

Please, if LPFM would stand in the way of the daily KLOVE broadcast, do not pass any rule or policy that would allow it.

I have mentioned much about KLOVE as a public service throughout my community, and throughout the greater national community. However, KLOVE serves me each time I listen by providing a positive message in a world designed to do much less! KLOVE, not being on the air would leave a large void in the radio waves streaming across America today.

KLOVE isn't a privately supported organization with advertisers in the traditional sense. It is a publically supported service...supported by its public. If so many Americans have united to support KLOVE financially...why would the FCC (a government organization designed to protect the public) rule in a manner that may be harmful to the KLOVE signal?

Please rule appropriately...Thank you, Michael A. Coultrap (Phx. AZ)
